

China Clean Summit 2013

Investing in the new industries and revitalize of the national economy

In the report by the Eighteenth National People's Congress, the project for "Constructing Beautiful China" was put firmly on the agenda, indicating that China is moving towards sustainable development and showing its determination and confidence in selecting pathways towards green development. In line with rapid economic growth, the country is becoming dedicated to constructing a more comfortable, neat and clean society thanks to the shared aspirations and hopes of the people.

The report also advocates a focus on developing the economy by using "green" technology alongside recycling technology and low-carbon technology to complete the necessary economic structural adjustments. As one of the most important aspects of environmental engineering, cleaning technology helps to reduce energy consumption and creates a better life for people, and therefore the industry is inextricably implicated in the report and the developing direction of the nation.

Recycling means using cleaning technology to reduce, reuse and recycle materials and waste, and cleaning technology has penetrated into all aspects of the national economy, creating huge demand for commercial and industrial cleaning in China. The country as a whole is excited about the cleaning industry's golden opportunity.

Thus, the organizer of the 14th China Clean Expo is going to hold the second session of the China Clean Industry Development Summit Forum 2013 (China Clean Summit) at 15:00 PM, April 1, in Shanghai. We sincerely invite you to participate in this top-level summit for Asia's cleaning industry.
